

Frequently Asked Questions:

Q: How long does the licensing process take?

A: It can take up to 12 weeks, or sometimes even longer, depending on various factors. Once your application is submitted, you can check your status on the State of Ohio e-license website listed below. www.elicense.ohio.gov

Q: As an employee of an Ohio casino, can I gamble where I work?

A: No, you are prohibited from gambling at the casino where you are employed and at any Ohio casino affiliated with your employer. You may, however, patronize non-employer affiliated Ohio casinos, non-Ohio casinos, and “racinos,” which are regulated by the Ohio Lottery and Racing Commissions, as permitted by your employer.

Q: Can I ever get licensed if I have a disqualifying offense?

A: No, unless and until your record is expunged or sealed. In determining whether to grant an expungement or sealing request, the court may consider such factors as how much time has lapsed since the offense occurred and the strides you have made in your life since then. Please note that having your record expunged or sealed does not guarantee licensure. Your application must still be thoroughly reviewed.

Information for Casino Gaming Licensees

- You are required to wear your casino gaming license in plain view on your uniform at all times while you are on duty at the casino.
- Remember your license is issued by the Ohio Casino Control Commission, not the casino that employs you. Therefore a casino can't "take away" your license. If you have any questions about your license, contact the Commission.
- Your license can be used for employment at any of the four Ohio casinos located in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. However, if you change casino employers, you must complete and submit a Duty to Update Information form.
- Once you receive your license, it is valid for three years. During that time, you are required to update and complete the Duty to Update Information form, found on the Commission website, if there are any applicable changes to your personal information.
- To get a replacement copy of your casino gaming license I.D. card, fill out and submit the Request for a Duplicate License form on the Commission's website under the Licensing tab. There is a fee to obtain a replacement card.
